My mother ran through the forest tears running down her face she carried me in her mouth until we reached river. Water splashed on the stones as the waves got bigger, and bigger. "Come, follow me to the other side" she said to the three of us leaping onto the first stone. My brother larchkit leaped first and made it to the first stone, then my sister petalkit leaped onto the first stone she made it. Then it came to be my turn I leaped I half way made it onto the sone my tail and hind legs were in the water. Larchkit saw me he helped me onto the next stone then he leaped to the second stone, but Larchkit got his footing wrong and he slipped into the water. I tried yowling for my mother, but the wind cut my yowl of my sister tried to save him by jumping in. I finally saw their heads pop out of the water. I leaped to next stone to catch up to my mother. Than I leaped to the next and the next I finally caught up with my mother. A huge wave crashed over my head sending me into the huge dark river. I tried to yowl for help, but that only made water fill into my mouth. My mother finally noticed she tried reaching out to petalkit, but she was too far. A wave crashed down onto me, I swam to the surface to hear my sister, and brother wailing for help I do my best to help them keep their head up. Up in the distance I hear a huge roaring sound as we get closer I see water rolling off of the edge. I try to get a hold of things that would prevent me from falling off the mysterious edge, but it's to late I fall off the edge and fall into the darkness of the river.

I woke up washed up on the shore, my pelt was soaked and I started to shiver as the wind blew my pelt. A gray tabby she cat walked up to me. She picked me up and carried me off to a den. Once there I saw petalkit, and larchkit, they ran up to me once the unknown she cat placed me down. "Are you alright" asked petalkit as they looked at me with wide eyes. "I think so, are we in Starclan" I asked them. "No silly we survived the river some how" meowed Larchkit. "You kits are very lucky you could have died out there" meowed the she cat. "Who are you" I asked looking into her Amber eyes. "My name is feather, and I always wanted kits of my own, so would you like me to care for you?" She asked. "Of course we do" petalkit squealed. "Alright first we have to go somewhere follow me" she said. After a while they arrived at a barn. A black and white tom stood at the entrance his eyes were shocked and scared. "What's wrong father?!" Feather asked concerned. The tom flicked his tail signaling for his daughter to follow him inside the barn. I walked closer to the barn to see what had happened my brother, and sister close behind me. Then I could make out a shape of my mother laying on the ground lifeless.
